RANDOM NOTES.

By a Wanderso Reporter.

No. XX.

As an agricultural district, particularly for the growth of cereals, Orange takes its place amongst the district nature of the climate more resembles that of England than any part of the centry I have yet visited. It is almost upon the highest point of the table land in the Western district, and the heavy mountains by which it is surrounded, amongst which the snow-clad peaks of the Canoblas are the most prominent, attract clouds in all seasons, and render the atmosphere much more humid than in less favoured places. The result of this position is that the winter here is exceedingly severe, and that heavy frosts and snow prevail during five months of the year, and have that revivifying effect upon the soil that is so rauch thought of at home. Wheat has to be sown here as in England, to lie through the winter, whilst oats thrive beyond all conception. Maize, too, is produced in favourable seasons, though the larger kind is a somewhat precarious crop, not coming to its proper maturity when the spring has been later than usual, and the succeeding winter has set in carlier. All the productions of an English climate grow with the greatest luxuriance, whether fruits, shrubs, or flowers, and many of all these have I seen for the first time in their full perfection at Orange.

As a natural consequence of this favourable position

set in carlier. All the productions of an English climate grow with the greatest luxuriance, whether fruits, shrubs, or flowers, and many of all these have I seen for the first time in their full perfection at Orange.

As a natural consequence of this favourable position Orange has, for a long time, been an agricultural district, though only within these last few years has it come prominently into public notice. The opening of the Lachlan gold-field first drew igeneral attention to its many advantages, and not a few of those who were attracted by the golden riches of Forbes had sense enough to see the more selid prespects held out by the fertility of the Orange, soil, and being disappointed in their original quest, sat down to follow digging of a different kind. In almost every direction you take out of Orange, you will find a number of small plots of land, from twenty to eighty acres, under cultivation, or preparing for cultivation. This is more especially the case between Orange and the Canoblas, and thence in a broad belt two or three miles from the main Western Road, down into the Bathurst district. The frontages to the road are all held in large blocks of hundreds and, in some cases, of thousands of acres, and all held by private owners, who had foresight enough to appreciate the valuable soil, and bought up in the carlier days of settlement. The free selectors have, of course, availed themselves of the Lands' Alienation Act, but not by any means to the vast extent that some persons would lead the people of Sydney to believe. For instance, under the 13th clause of the Act, which may be said to be the real free selection clause, only 200 persons have taken up land by conditional purchase since the 1st January, 1862. This does not look as if the real bona fide agriculturist thought a very great deal of the advantages that Mr. Robertson has held out to kim. In the first year of the Act coming into operation, 1864, there were only 92 selections under this clause; in 1864, the number came down to 77; and up to Orange.—
On a sharing consequence of the few grash has it there is though only within these last for grash has it there is the property of the Lachlang gold off, first down to the many abreathers, and not a few Lachlang gold off, first down to find the state enough for the first property of the Orange and the Lachlang gold of the first down to find the digits of a slighter kind. In will find a number of small place of land, from twenty of the control o diversion to old cows, who rather like the amusement of overcoming the obstacles opposed, than anything clase.

I asked a small tenant farmer at Lewis Pends, with whom I had a conversation on this very subject, why he did not free select? "Not if I know it!" said he. "It would take all I'm worth in the world to get twenty acres ready for the plough, and then what would I do after?" Besides having everything ready to go to work with, the tenant is often assisted in other ways by the landlord. Horses are lent for the ploughing, or occasional employment is given, and these are matters of great consideration to the "poor man" who wants to get along honestly and unencumbered by debt. And here is the great evil that I see in free selectors in this district. Nine-tenths of the free selectors are crippled with debts, and are entirely in the hands of the larger storekeepers or others, who have advanced them the means of carrying on. In many instances, the ten pounds paid down as the deposit on the conditional purchase of some forty acres have been borrowed for the purpose, and the unfortunate selector has commenced without a shilling, has toiled without reward, has lived hard, it is true, but upon credit; and now that he sees what may really be called a property around him, it is so hopelessly laden with debt that his interest in it is but very small indeed. That this is very generally the case I have been assured in many quarters, by gentlemen who was lamenting to me that his occupation who was lamenting to me that his occupation who was lamenting to me that his occupation was almost gone by reason of the free selection as well as by those who have opposed it. A wayside publican who was lamenting to me that his occupation was almost gone by reason of the free selection as well as by those who have opposed it. A wayside publican who was lamenting to me that his occupation was almost gone by reason of the free selection as well as by those who have opposed it. A wayside publican who was lamenting to me that his occupatio whether of hay or grain, at the harvest time, when prices are low, or advancing money before the crop is it to cut, on condition that they shall have a certain quantity of it at harvest time at the price then ruling. It is well known that at harvest time the price of grain especially is lower than at any other period of the year, and thus the men are victimised through their necessities in every possible way. The dealers in grain all know that the hard-up agriculturist must get cash as soon as possible; and so by some extraordinary coincidence, I will not say combination, the price at harvest always goes down to the lowest possible figure. Last harvest, for instance, although it was well known that the wheat crop throughout the coast, and in some of the inland districts, was a complete failure from 11st, the price of wheat at Orange for a long time ranged at about 4s, per bushel. At the same time wheat was being imported from Adelaide into Sydney at 9s, and 10s, per bushel. There happened to be very fine heavy crops in this district at the time, and for some time the farmers put up with the price of wheat to Sydney. The long land carriage and the cost of loading was almost enough to discourage the attempt, but it was made, and the result was that after all expenses were paid, a shilling a bushel more than was paid by the Orange grain dealers was returned to the enterprising farmers. This soon became known, and many other loads were sent down, until the dealers of Orange, finding the trade going out of their hends, were compelled to advance the price, and by offering 4s. 9d, per bushel made it hardly worth while to the grower to risk the long transit and possible suctuations of the market for the sake of 3d. per bushel.

So much as to the position of the men, and now with regard to the men themselves. The free selec-

LOBN V. FATTORINI.
Pleintiff, a lootinsker, sought to recover the sum of £1 19s., the balance of an account for a pair of boots sold sid delivered. Defendant pleaded not indebted, and that he had not received the boots claimed for, in consequence of their not fitting. It appeared that the boots returned were to be debited to defendant's brother, and defendant averred that he ought to have been credited with two guiness. Judgment for plaintiff for £17s, on condition that the boots by sent to defendant.

of free selection, and concluded thus "" Wait a bit-by-and-by-" and here he extended his arms and spread out his highers as if, like Zamiel, he were putting a spell upon all around—" By-and-bye, I'm the free selector! They make the house, clear the ground, and put up fences, then "—and he brought one hand down upon the table, upon which he pressed it grimly with a kind of half wrench—" then I come in and fire select."

A gentleman, a clergyman, who was a most strenuous supporter of free selection, told me frankly that it was a nistake, that the free selection told me frankly that it was a nistake, that the free selection told me frankly that it was a nistake, that the free selections throughout the district were the most miserable men in it, and that anime-tenths of them were entirely at the mercy of the starckcept is. I have heard the same thing from a dozon different quarters, and the fact scena to be generally solmitted upon all hands. But, besides the store keepers, there are others who take advantage of the mecessities of these men, purchasing their produce, detendant. Plaintiff not being able to make out his case was necessited. Mr. Curtis for plaintiff, Mr. Salomons for defendant.

BARDY V. MORTIMER.

Plaintiff, a commission agent, suod to recover £132 for goods sold and delivered, and £23 lls. for unreturned empty bags. Mr. Butler, instructed by Mr. Pitzhardingo, jun. appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. S. C. Brown for the defendant. It was alleged that plaintiff had at different times sold to defendant a large quantity of potatoes, and in many instances the bags had not been returned. From November, 1843, to July, 1835, plaintiff had no dealings with defendant, but in July last defendant purchased of plaintiff a carge of potatoes at £6 lbs. per ton. After carting away about ten tons of the potatoes, defendant purchased of the price baving fallen to £6 s. per ton. On he following week, the price went up to £7, and defendant then went to plaintiff and demanded the remainder of the potatoes at £6 lbs. per ten. Plaintiff refused to let defendant have them then unless at the higher rate, and having in the meantime stored the potatoes he claimed from defendant a further sum for storage. The tickets of delivery of several cargoes were carefully examined, and, ultimately, the quantity of potatoes delivered to defendant having been proved to the satisfaction of his Honor, as also the number of bags that had not been returned, a verdict was given for plaintiff for £156 lls.

MITCHELL V. & AVINGS BANK.

not been returned, a verdiet was given for plantif for £165 11s.

MITCHELL V. MAVINOS DANK.

This was an action by a coloured man, to recover from the Trustees of the Savings Bank, the sum of £31 15s. 6d. deposited in the bank. The plaintiff had in January, 1864, a balance of £43 15s. 6d. in the bank, and having withdrawn £12, left a balance of £31 15s. 6d. He then went away to see, and during his absence, a woman describing herself as his wife, went to the bank with his bank book, and an order purporting to be signed by him, whereupon the money was paid to her. When plaintiff returned from sea, he found that his box had been broken open, his bank book taken away, and his wife had cloped with another man. A copy of the rules of the bank was handed in, and from these it was shown that say person bringing the bank book of another with an order for payment from the depositor, could receive the mency. After hearing a good cast of evidence and much argument, his Honor reserved judgment until this morning. Mr. Salomons, instructed by Mr. Weedon, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. M. H. Stephen, instructed by Mr. Curtie for defendants.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

MONDAY, September 11th.—A violent thunderstorm burst over the town between 6 and 7 o'clock this moorning, accompanied by a delightful fall of rain, which lasted about two nours. The lightning was extremely vivid, and attended by some accidents which might have resulted more seriously. It struck the roof of the Police-barracks and displaced a quantity of the shingles; pierving the roof it made its way through the ceiling, entering just above the door of a partition wall. The door and door-frame were splintered, and a large quantity of the plaster was dislodged. The electric fluid then appears to have made its escape through a window, breaking a pane of glass end doing other damage. In another spartment, under the same roof, where two children were sleeping, the lightning shattered the window so much that scarcely a sound pane of glass was left. It also injured the door leading to the same room, taking a piece of wood out of one of the panels. The front of a house in Court-street also sustained considerable damage—two men narrowly escaping from being struck. Other accidents, more or less alarming, occurred during the storm. The rain has done some little good in allaying the dust, and cleansing the young grass, but we fear beyond this little benefit has been derived. It would take a day's continuous rain, at least, to satisfy the demand of our thirsty soil.

Coxcent ny Ma. and Mss. Heine.—These artists gave one of their exquisite concerts at the School of Arts, here, on Monday evening last. The hall was quite filled with one of the most fashionable and enthusiastic audiences which we have ever witnessed in Windsor. The merits of these performers are now so well known and appreciated in the metropolis, that it would be superfluous to pass here a lengthened panegyric upon them. The programe embraced the following morceaux:—Sol violin, "Taratelle," by Mr. Heine; scle violin, "Souvenir de Mossou," by Mr. Heine; scle violin, "Souvenir de Mossou," by Mr. Heine; scle violin, which occ

Eferring to the action taken by the Banks, with reference to the late application of the Government, the Geelong Register says:—"At a conference held between the managers of the six banks, the Government proposal met the approval of the Union Bank, the Bank of Victoria, and the London Chartered Bank; and when the conference broke up, the managers of these banks left with a distinct understanding that they would support the Government. A second conference was held the following day, when a discussion arose as to the political bearing of the proposition of the Government, and a motion was ultimately put from the chair whether the banks should or should not give the Government the aid they required. On division, there appeared for the affirmative the Union Bank, the Bank of Victoria, and the London Chartered Bank; and for the negative, the Bank of New South Wales, the Colonial Bank of Australia, and the Bank of Australasia. The division being equal, the chairman, Mr. Falconer, of the Bank of Australasia, exercised the privilege of a casting vote, and gave it against the Government."

Ditermined Case of Self-destruction.—A compositor named James Barrett, employed in the office of the Wangaratta Despatch, committed suicide on Monday last in a very determined manner. He had been checked by his employer for coming late to his work, resigned his situation, went out and purchased swan shot, returned to his bedroom, adjoining the office, and blew his head to pieces, using his right toe to disch-rige the gun. The following letter was found in his bedroom:—"Dear Flynn,—When you will receive this I will be in that 'Bourne from which no traveller returns. We shall never meet again, my dear friend. Things have gradually been going from bad to worse since you left. I owe some money in the township, and I am very much troubled at it. Dear Flynn, I feel that I am not altogether in my sound mind, but all that led to the row this morning was my own fault. I acted in the way I did with a view to bring matters to a climax. Dear Flynn, think kindly of me sometimes, and I hardly like to ask you to pray for a suicide; but sourly God will take it as sufficient expiation that I can quit this earth so young, when full of life and vigour, and just beginning to taste its joys. Dear Flynn, the portrait in my room I wish you would return to Miss.—. Say what you think best. I dare not dictate words to such a pure being in such an hour; but do not shock her by too sudden an avowal of the manner of my dreadful death. When I think of her I feel what I might have been; but now the verdict of twelve humbugs will consign my name to infamy—and thus the fate of one who might have been a better man. Rowan—[his employer]—was not to I lame in the matter—I know how my death will rouble his kind heart. Good-bye.—James Bar-Rett."

THE POLITICAL CRISIS.

THE POLITICAL CRISIS.

We understand that, in pursuance of the arrangements entered into by the Government for the resumption of Treasury payments without the assistance of an Appropriation Act, as many as three friendly actions (each for 140,000) have been brought by the London Chartered Bank. The first was initiated on the 6th instant, and judgment was confessed the following day, as stated in the Argus of Saturday. The second action was commenced on the 7th, but was discontinued on the 8th, probably because proceedings were taken too soon—it may be before the whole of the £40,000 had been advanced. The third action was brought on the 8th instant, and to that, so far as we can learn, the Attorney-General has not yet pleaded. The following is a copy of the process issued by the bank in each action.

COLLECTION OF CUSTOMS' DUTIES ON THE MURRAY.

THE MURRAY.

(From the Argus, September 9.)

Somewhar late in the day there has been laid before Parliament some "correspondence between the Borenments of South Australia and Victoria with reference to the cellection of Customs duties on the Murray." The whole correspondence is now stale, and it seems hardly worth while to go back to the question whether Victoria and New South Wales did or did not set discourteously to South Australia on the occasion when our Ministerial deputation to Sydney was so successful iniducing the New South Wales Government very foelishly to agree to what the New South Wales Parliament very wisely declined to confirm. Still, this dilatory State Paper comes to us with a certain raise and a certain freshness. It recalls to the imaginator the fact that we are living with observant neighbours on both sides of us. It reminds us that the facal duties of a Government are not fully performed as soon as a bank has been induced to advance a little money to carry on with from hand to mouth, and in debance of the Constitution. We presume that Victoria will get into regular business methods again at some future time, and, after our present difficulties have been overcome, we hope to see a Treasurer better employed than in negotiating with the banks, with a view to dispense with the Appropriation Act. For the uniment, however, it appears to be thought that if Government, by means of collusion—or rather fraul—can precure some needful accommodation, it is in a position to sing parans. The emergency had got to be so pressing that everything clear gave way to the necessity for immediate relief. The patient, who was in articule merit, has a position to sing parans. The emergency had got to be so pressing that everything clear gave way to the necessity for immediate relief. The patient, who was in articule merit, has inswered the purpose for the moment, and the Government, finding, that beyond expectation, it is still alive, is apparently under the impression that it is getting well. We cannot doubt that (From the Argus, September 9.)

wholesale smuggling across the border.

Within another month or so, we shall probably be made aware whether South Australia intends to avail herself of the extraordinary chances at present open to her for augmenting her trade at the expease of ours. The Government, it appears, is divided upon the subject, and the feeling of the country is very far from unanimous. Although it is evident that protections: fallscies have now taken no hold upon the popular mind in South Australia, it is apparent also that there is in that colony an almost morbid dread of anything in the shape of direct taxation; and the movement in favour of complete free trade has been languid and partial, because people have been alriad that the abolition of customs duties might involve the imposition favour of complete free trade has been languid and partial, because people have been afraid that the abolition of customs duties might involve the imposition of an income-tax, or of something equivalent thereto. Mr. Reynolds, and those who think with him, conceive that the resources of the colony would be sufficient without either an income-tax or a custom-house; but a very curious difference of opinion on these points among the members of the Government made itself apparent a short time since, and until Parliament meets again in Adalaide, we shall remain uninformed as to whether the evils of a protectionist tariff here are or are not to be augmented and complicated by the abandoment of the most productive import duties on the part of our Western neighbours. The spirit duties, it seems almost certain, will be greatly reduced, if they are not wholly abolished, because the demand of the South Australian vine and fruit growers for the distillation has become somewhat imperative, and widely recognised, and the anti-protectionist feeling is so decided in South Australia that the Government there would certainly not propose, and the Parliament would certainly not propose, and the particular of the same time that a heavy duty was levized on the importation of foreign spirits. Under fiscal changes that may be looked for in South Australia within the next few months, we may expect ind, as Mr. Reynolds handly puts it, that mercantile proceedings will be originated that will render needs sary to these colonies very large and expensive Customs staffs.

sary to these colonies very large and expensive Catoms staffs.

Differing so much as we do from our neighbour in commercial interests and fiscal circumstances, it may not be possible to act in thorough unison as to tariff, and it must be admitted that such partial endeavour towards federal action in matters of finance as have yet been made by means of conferences have been decided failures. Still we feel satisfied that a uniform tariff throughout Australia would be of so much value that it should never be lost eight of a something to be constantly striven after; and when, amid more wholesome political continuous than those which prevail at present, the quastico of the Customs revenue comes under discussion agin, it is to be hoped that the country will aclonger tolerate the practice of subordinating great and general interests to those of party. By going to work more intelligently, and, we should add, more honestly, than our Government has done, we may hope to place our commercial system in harmony shift those of the other colonies, and then we shall not be exposed to the humiliating defeat in our endeavour to get our neighbours to the east to accompany us in feolish retrograde movement, nor shall we have the occasion that exists now for apprehending such while and expensive, in the words of his despatch which we have already quoted.

AN EPISODE OF THE SIEGE OF GIBRALTAR.

AN EPISODE OF THE SIEGE OF GIRRALTAR, (Contributed to Blackwood's Magazine, by one who took part in the operations.)

When I was at the siege of Gibraltar, my post was fer some time in the Queen's Battery, which immediately fronted the besiegers' works. It was my special duty to acquire as accurate a knowledge of those works, their armament, position, defences, and progress as it was possible to obtain by constant observation and a very middling spyglass, while enveloped in dust and smoke, choked with sulphur, and exposed to incessant complements of shot and shell. The knowledge thus obtained I had the honour of imparing to our gallant Lieutenant-Governor General Boyd, when he came out to the front from time to time. This circumstance procured for me the glorious distinction of going out as guide when we made a sortic by night for the purpose of surprising the enemy's works burning and destroying them. I am not going describe the sortic; you will find all about it in Drinkwater. Let me only say that it proved a real surprise to the enemy; their works were ruined, their guas spiked, and their approaches in a corresponding degree retarded, which was just what we wanted.

The affair was nearly over, their gabions along the

The affair was nearly over, their gabions along the whole front were in a blaze; but though ontumbered at our point of attack, the enemy fought stoutly, and a good deal of savage skirmishing was still going on I was in the thick of a regular melee, hard knocks at close quarters, when my attention was arrested by a determined Frenchman, an officer in splendid uniform, who was doing chivalrous deeds, as if he fancied his ewn am might restore the lost combut. He was a mere pigmy; and his pluckiness had so won upon our fellows that they were bent upon effecting an object to which is own valour was the only obstacle—that of taking him alive. Flourishing his sword, he skipped about, facing every point of the compass in succession, and thrusting with loud cries of deflance, at every one that approached him. "Don't kill him!" the men cried. "Take him alive; don't hurt the little chap; "though the little chap had already disabled a sergeant and a private who had ventured too near him. I shouted, taking off my bat and entreating him for his own sake to surrender; it was clear, indeed, that he had no chance left but to be taken prisoner or to bite the dust. He returned my salute, but still maintained the defensive, spinning round and round, and lunging at the horizon. As we had done our work, and it was high time to get back to our lines lest the enemy should attack us in force, I began to fear that it would be out of my power to save the little Frenchman's life. Our men, too, were beginning to lose patience, and showed a disposition to close upon him with fixed bayonets; in which case, though he might very possibly have set his mark upon one or two more of them, the consequences to himself might have been fair from agreeable. At that moment, and just as I was thinking, as a last effort, of trying what I could do by approaching him in person, he seemed to awake suddenly to a consciousness of his own peril; rushe

(Such, in these days of duelling, were our notions of housur.)

"Ah," cried the little Frenchman, "that is brave! that is noble! that is just exactly what I knew you would say! But I have anticipated your chivalrous sentiments by equal chivalry on my own part. My challenge is already sent; I dispatched it an hour ago, and I have the captain's acceptance in my pocket. The only favour, therefore, which I now ask, is your obliging company as my friend."

The affair came off—the weapons, rapiers; the time, the same afternoon; the field of slaughter, a retired spot behind the barracks, and not far from the southern extremity of the Rock. Nevertheless, the business having got wind, a few officers lounged down to sec; and several other persons, civilians as well as soldiers, stood looking on at a distance.

The parties being placed, a few thrusts were exchanged without effect. The captain looked sulky enough. It was evident he keenly felt his ridiculous position; he he biggest man in the garrison, stuck up viz—vis in mortal combat with the least. The poor man fenced as if he couldn't help himself. The little Frenchman, on the contrary, was all activity and enterprise. At length, after a brief passage of arms, the two stood facing each other for a few seconds in prefect stillness, their swords barely touching at their extremities. Suddenly the little Frenchman swelled to twice his natural size, stamped, shouted "Hah!" sprang forward a yard, sprang back again. It was done in the twinkling of an eye. There he stood, just in his former attitude, as though he had never moved. At first I was not aware of any result; but three inches of his sword had taken effect, just as surely as when aspider, having netted a wasp, jumps at him, nips, and jumps away again. The Captain had got an ugly progue in his sword-arm, between wits and elbow. The first token was that he used some shocking bad language; next, he turned deadly pale; then his sword gradually went down, down, down; then his word gradually went down, down, down; then his sulting glance.

I was on duty, and didn't want to quarrel.

"Come," said I, laughing, and eyeing his portly person, "we won't dispute which baboons are the biggest, or which donkeys. I grant it. There is one species of apes on the Rock which is considerably larger than the common sort, and which, therefore, may perhaps be properly called baboons. Well, in passing along that perilous path, one of those baboons met you. It was an interesting meeting to both parties, and a singular adventure. Now please to tell me all particulars."

The Captain, somewhat toned down by the idea of telling, began to narrate. For some distance he made his way along the path with no obstruction, save only the want of additional space. One arm brushed against a perpendicular wall of lofty rock, the other hung free over the abyss. He owned he didn't like it; but his colness and determination, not to mention the impossibility of turning back, carried him forward. Just as he had got round a projecting ridge, which, once passed, return was hopeless, what do you think he saw in the path before him? An enormous baboon! yes, sir, not an ape, a baboon. What was to be done? He could not go back, and the baboon would not Passing was impossible. There they stood for seme seconds, each looking deggers at the other. It was a question of life and death! Presently the baboon began to grin—grinned menacingly—raised himself erect on his hind lega, and grinned again, advanced a few steps, and gave another grin! The Captain could easily have pitched the beast over the ledge, but in so doing might he not have lost his balance, and gone over himself? At this moment, a bright idea occurring to the Captain with his hand, hoping that the beast would do as goats do under similar circumstances—i.e., lie down upon the path, in order that he, the Captain, might walk over him. The baboon took no netice. What remained? Only that, as the baboon would not, the Captain must. Accordingly (this part of the adventure the Captain and the henour of landing him in the blow the enemy a treathes, and was tost to our view. But not till he had been recognised both by the Captain and myself.

"That little wretch of a Prenchman!" exclaimed the Captain.

The ludicrous really broke at once upon my mind.

"The baboon!" I replied.

Captain Schmaub turned on me like a tiger.

I didn't want to hurt the Captain's feelings, but the whole thing was so unutterably comical, laughter was irrepressible. So I laughed heartily; there was no helping it. The Captain's rage knew no bounds. It was too clear, "that little wretch" had again been too much for him; had disguised himself; had taken the path at the back of the Rock, had there met the Captain, and had got eff undetected and unsuspected. The Captain, to hide his wrath and mortification, was again disposed to quarrel. Perceiving, however, that I continued far less inclined to wrangle than to laugh, he gradually toned down, and turned sulky. Savage that the "little wretch" had got off, what chiefly stung him was one particular incident. After some minutes' gloomy silence, it at length came out—"To think that I was his bridge, and that he actually walked over me from end to end!"

"Never mind, Captain," said I. "Considering your different amplitudes, he knew very well it would be a much more serious business if you walked over him; so of two evils he chose the less. And now let me advise you to keep your own counsel. Nobody in the garrison knows of this little affair at the back of the Rock but our two selves; and I shall not mention it."

Somewhat mollified, the Captain awhile remained silent and pensive. At length, growing confidential and speaking low, "Do you know," said he, "just as he had got his beastly foot on the small of my back, he gave utterance to a stranger sort of guttural cry, which I did think rather odd as coming from a baboon; a kind of mixture between a chuckle and the crewing of a cock!"

So, then, the little Frenchman had felt such incesse exultation at the rich idea of walking over the Captain, that, between crowing and chuck twenty hours which immediately preceded his flight; and for not reporting this, the proprietor, a civilian, had to pay a small peeuniary fine—a far lighter punishment than he deserved.

Whether the baboon carried any important information respecting the state of affairs within the fortress to our enemies without, we never learned. If he did, it mattered little. A few days after came their grand attack. We burnt their floating batteries, and shortly after, the siege was raised.

Passing along the sea-wall the second day after the attack, I noticed a brother officer with his elbows on the parapet, blowing a cloud. I was soon by his side, doing as he did. Our faces were towards the water. We saw the whole surface of the bay covered with fragments of wreck, the debris of battered galleons. And let me remark, if we had not burnt them we should have sunk them so steady and overwhelming was the fire of our artillery. True, we fired red-hot balls; but I quite agreed with the remark of an old artillery officer. "Sir, we could have beaten them with cold shot."

him well. In this case there was nothing more to be said. The Captain, disappearing over the ridge, looked very much like a man stepping down into vacancy.

Pursuing my course from the Reck Guard towards the Signal-house, I had covered about half the distance when I heard a human voice. At that solitary elevation it sounded odd. Whence did it come! It seemed to proceed from the left or ridge of the Rock. So! it was the Captain. Nothing visible but his head; he spoke in his usual graff key, somewhat tremulous though: "Here! Lend a hand."

I helped him up. He was blowzed, and prodigiously sweated: we won't say frightened, but, to use the mildest term, a little "excited."

He spoke vindictively. "You didn't tell me! sheuld meet anything! Couldn't go back; and on the breadth of a knife-board! There I was! Much obliged to you!"

"A goat!" I asked.

It was well known it too, that the goats which browse on the Rock in going from one part of the Rock to the other, do occasionally use those "knife-board" paths along the face of the precipice, and when two of them meet, as there is no room to pass, and the outsider would infallibly be precipitated, one lies down, and the other walks over him. This led me to fancy that a goat had met the Captain, and that either he had haid himself along to be walked over by the goat, or the goat had! done as much for him.

"Nonense! goat?" he exclaimed. "What do you mean by goat? No, sir, not a goat, a baboon."

"Met you at the back of the Rock? Oh, one of the forth walks over him. This led me to fancy that a goat had met the Captain, and that either he had haid himself along to be walked over by the goat or the goat had! done as much for him.

The funeral was very generally attended by the officers of the garrison, amongst whom M. de Montmaur had been laughed at and rather liked. It was not altogether to the liking of Captain Schanab; but that gallant officer, also yielding to my persuasive powers, was present with the rest.

The Austrian Special Correspondent of the Daily Telegraph thus writes, at the latter end of May, to that journal:

It is really charming to read the Vaterland, which is aroused by the mere name of England, as a buil by a red shawl. A Hungarian paper lately had some with however, the Vaterland ranging. It declares that self-government is only possible in a country where there is a middle classe of landowners; and such is not the case in England, where large estates are the rule. In the cities, the middle classes from the cross, retiring-into-telefafter-the-fashion-of a-tortoise-in-its-shell—that's a pretty decent compound word-selfashness of the great and small shop-keepers. So far, however, as the middle classes take part in the services of self-government, they merely form the suits of the highest class, and occupy the large the cost of the cross of

The following highly romantic story, told in the columns of the Berlin Police Journal, will prove that the age of thivalry is not entirely passed:—"A travelling adventure, which would afford matter for a sensation novel, happened in Berlin, last Tuesday, to a young prince with a remarkably well-sounding name, which we will conceal through motives of discretion. This young prince, who is at the blooming age of twenty-two, had fallen in his native town into the snares of a French actress forty years of age, and this aroused the just anger of his exalted mother. It was hoped to put a sharp end to the liaison by hinting to the lady that she would be kind enough to quit the city and country at once, if she did not vish to expose herself to great unpleasantness. The Frenchwoman was well aware that people did not joke in the State in which she was living, and that as the Habeas Corpus. Act had not yet been introduced there, the good advice given her must be respected. She, therefore, packed up her traps, wrote a note to Paris, and set off en route for Berlin. It seems, however, that she found time to let her youthful lover know of her forced journey, for he joined her on her arrival in Berlin. Just as they were starting off by the French express, the prince was surprised in his coupé by the entrance of a strange gentleman, who, with a most reverential bow, expressed his regret that he had orders to arrest him, and must do so at once. At the same time he showed the prince a paper signed by a very exalted hand. The young prince did not lose countenance for a moment. 'Have you also an order from the Embassy' be asked; 'for without that you cannot arrest me.' The stranger was evidently struck by this objection, the correctness of which he recognised. But he did not lose countenance either. He made a sign to another gentleman, said a few words to him, and re more laughter, two or three years ago in England, merely because the idea was a novelty. Two of these establishments are now at work; the first at St. Germain-en-Laye, in France; the other at Brüchsal, in the Grand Duchy of Baden. A marked distinction exists between these two schools: at the French one the pupils are taught Greek and Latin, and prepared for the universities; while at Brüchsal, where they are only admitted from the age of twelve to twenty, they learn exclusively the three great languages. Although the school was only opened last August, the progress made is most satisfactory, and the director has published a really interesting report. Most of the pupils join after their education is ended, to prepare themselves for trade, and there is a special course of lectures for them. For this reason the prices are kept as low as possible, in order that the sons of poor people may benefit. The instruction is almost entirely mutual; a French boy and German boy sit down with a German book, and vice cera, and explain to each other as well as they can what it is all about. Among the observations which President de Sechelles has had the opportunity of making is the following curious trait of nationality:—"In accordance with our scheme we have pupils from England, Germany, and France, as well as of various religions—Catholics, Protestants, Anglicans, and Israelites. There has never been the slightest quarrel among the pupils about religion, whence we conclude that the odism theologicum has disappeared with the new generation. But we must confess it has not progressed so far with nationality. The national hatred between the English and French is not yet quite extinguished; while, on the other hand, the German pupils agree capitally with both nations: but we hope this evil will be removed by longer intercourse, although the character of the two first nations is too opposed for them to live on a friendly footing."

One characteristic remark to end with. I was walking the other day with a well-known author, when I ha

THE CONSPIRACY TRIAL AT WASHINGTON.

PRESONATION AND FALSE EVIDENCE.

(From the London Daily Telegraph, June 23.)

The following is the affidavit of Mr. J. Watson Wallace denouncing the testimony of Sanford Conover, who, he declares, has personated him before the court-martial:—

"James Watson Wallace, of the city and district of Montreal, counsellor at law, being duly sworn upon the Holy Evangelists, doth depose and say I am the same James Watson Wallace who gave evidence on the subject of the St. Alban's raid, which evidence appears on page 212 of the printed report of the said case. I am a native of the county of London, in the commonwealth of Virginia. I arrived in Montreal in the month of October last past. I resided during a portion of last winter and spring in houses in Craix-street and Monique-street, in the city of Montreal. I have seen and examined the report of what is called the suppressed evidence before the court-martial now being holden at Washington City, on Mistrees Surratt, Payne, and others; and I have looked carefully through the reports of the evidence in the New York papers of a person calling himself Sandford Conover, who deposed to the facts that whilst in Montreal he went by the name of James Watson Wallace, and gave evidence in the St. Alban's raid investigation. That the said Sanford Conover evidently personated me before the said court-martial. That I never gave any testimony whatsoever before the said court-martial at Washington City. That I never had knowledge of John Wilkes Booth, except seeing him upon the stage, and did not know he was in Montreal until I saw it published after the murder of President Lincoln. That I never was a correspondent of the New York Tribune. That I never was a correspondent of the New York Tribune. That I never had any confidential communication with Mr. George N. Sanders, Beverley Tucker, Hon. Jacob Thompson, General Carroll, of Tennessee, Dr. M. A. Pullen, or any of the others therein mentioned. That my acqu

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1865.

Wi were not in error when several weeks ago we pronounced the course of the Melbourne Ministry to be not only illegal but also revolu-tionary. Difficulties must often arise between the co-ordinate branches of the Legislature the co-ordinate branches of the Legislature; but their very existence was in contemplation of the advantages which might accrue from the action of separate bodies in legislation, and the delay, and therefore greater deliberation, which would ensue. To say that the Upper House differs from the Lower, and that the Lower House will have its own way, is merely to state that one branch of the Legislature is determined to destroy the constitutional action. determined to destroy the constitutional action of the other. Nor is this all; for whenever one of the three estates is successfully crushed by either of the others, it will be found to terminate in the concentration of legislative authority in one the concentration of legislative authority in one. For example, the Lower House has determined the selection of the Ministry. The Ministry give their advice to the Governor. The Governor, overawed by the perils of resistance to an unscrupulous and domineering force, is rendered impotent, and weakly relinquishes his mediating and moderating functions, and thus the Upper House exists only as an excrescence, and its deliberations have efficacy only by sufferance, and not by recognised right.

The long quarrel which took place between the Parliament of England and the STUARTS was partly founded upon the disposition of that dynasty to dispense with legal supplies, and to find either in "benevolences" or "ship money," or some other extraneous resource, the power of ruling without Parliament, and, consequently, of governing in an arbitrary manner. No principle has been hence more thoroughly established in the British Constitution than the it is a high crime and misdemeanour on the part of any Ministry to seek independently of legislative authority the means of paying the public obligations. The money power is that by which all others are overruled, and to seize this which all others are overruled, and to seize this even for a time is to change altogether the form of government, and to revoke all the guarantees which the legal Parliamentary system affords. The Government, upon its own authority, has

The Government, upon its own authority, has borrowed money of the London Chartered Bank to pay the public servants, thus dispensing with the sanction of Parliament to the supplies. The only proper designation of the ransaction is a conspiracy between Sir CHARLES DABLING on the one part, certain gentlemen holding Ministerial offices on the second part, and the London Chartered Bank on the third part, to annul and set aside the legal Constitution. All contracts which they may make will there-fore be null and void on this ground alone Nothing can be more obvious than that such a Noting can be more obvious than that such a contract must be, from its inception, and throughout all its stages, a contract against the State—not in its behalf or binding the people to a discharge. It will be a just retribution to the London Chartered Bank, which has become a party to this nefarious conspiracy, if it finds itself unable to recover its debt. Were any part of this money to be misappropriated by the persons who have its temporary custody, could Government be said to be defrauded? How could it claim to prosecute an appropriation which if made according to the pretended design would have been in violation of constitu-tional law? No rights can accrue based upon a crime, and therefore none can be violated. A little while ago two cattle-stealers set out to capture each a beast. By some misadventure each of them lost his prey. One of them, how-ever, going in search next morning, found and killed that which had been stolen by his neighbour. The rival started with great vehemence and vindictiveness to lay his charge before the magistrate that he had been robbed by his un-scrupulous neighbour. He was only saved from the disclosure of his misfortune, and a satisfactory to him, by the suggestion of some fellow wiser than himself—that it would be difficult to rob a man of that which he himself gal can never have a legal sanction, and what-ever may be the views of the Supreme Court of Victoria—which we have no reasonable doubt will be in harmony with the law—there is still a higher appeal which would assuredly disown and reprobate the whole transaction.

What is the object of this measure? To compel the Legislative Council to assent to a system of taxation without debate, and whatever system of taxation without debate, and whatever may be their conscientious objections to it; to de-prive them of their deliberative voice in the affairs of the country; to take from them that function for the exercise of which alone they exist. If they have the spirit of men—to say nothing of the dignity of statesmen and the fervour of patriots—they will exhaust all the powers they possess to defeat this atrocious scheme. There may be a loud mob denouncing them for a moment, but the sober sense of the them for a moment, but the sober sense of the them for a moment, but the sober sense of the world will applaud them; and Victoria will dis-cover ere long, probably in the measures last taken, how perilous it is for any Ministry to deviate from constitutional law, or to attempt to deviate from constitutional law, or to attempt to arrive at a political object by breaking through every obstacle by sheer impudence and brute force. Here are a number of men who hold power in defiance of all principles. The only loss they can suffer from the defeat of their projects is that calamity which they have resolved to prevent by any means—the loss of office. It is a great and unexpected misfortune that they should have found a Governor who is too unacquainted with his duties, or too wanting in resolution, to perform them, and who has himself sanctioned this gross illegality without any reasonable pretence. reasonable pretence.

The legitimate course in such a case is this:

If the present Ministry will not meet the views of the Legislative Council, to dismiss them, or to withdraw the obnoxious measures; or or to withdraw the obnoxious measures; or if a new Ministry be formed in consequence, and the Lower House will not accept them, then to dismiss the Assembly. Another election might return a House more favourable to constitutional principles. At all events, an appeal could be made to the Imperial Parliament for any legislative repredy which circumstances may make necessary. Imperial Parliament for any legislative remedy which circumstances may make necessary. Instead of this, we have now the QUERN's representative in the midst of a revolution as veritable as if had been brought about by barricades. No one can tell, indeed, what will be the end. It is probable that behind this spectacle, as it now appears, there are ambitions and projects which only wait for the hour of development, and that the blow struck at the Legislative Council is the first of a series by which Victoria will sink into a mean, miscrable, distracted, perhaps ferocious, republic.

No provocation on the part of the Legislative Council could have justified the proceeding taken against it; but in this case the ordinary justification is wanting. The financial measures, as such, of the Ministry were never rejected by the Upper House. The supposed opinions of its members indeed gave but little prospect that a bastard protection system would have their sanction. Still nothing had been done, and time might have overcome their objections if the will of a decided majority, formally expressed upon the subject, had gone against them. But anticipating their opposition, and in order to render it powerless, the Ministry have endeavoured to deprive them of their constitutional share in the decision, and have thus brought upon the country evils of which ustification is wanting. The financial measure brought upon the country evils of which we are far from having seen the last in number or duration.

LOOKING to the probability that mining in-dustry will always form a great element in our industrial activity, all improvements in the art of mining in any of its departments have a special interest for us. In this view the mechanical apparatus that is being successfully brought into use in the mother country for the number of coal-getting is deserving of natice. purpose of coal-getting is deserving of notice. It is some time now since the first attempt to substitute a machine for the human arm in the substitute a machine for the human arm in the process of hewing coal was made, and the progress of the invention was at first slow. The carly apparatus was cumbersome, and the advantage over manual labour was not very apparent. But the principle involved was the right one, and where this is the case progress is always assured. Many inventive minds have been turned to the subject and there are now several prefers for difject, and there are now several patents for dif-ferent machines. The use of boring apparatus for tunnelling in rai, way works has been con-temporaneously developed, and has helped to encourage the idea that mining may be carried on by machinery. The most conspicuous instance of tunnelling by machinery is in the case of the Mont Cenis Tunnel, through the case of the Mont Cenis Tunnel, through the Alps, and the success of the ingenious apparatus invented specially for that work by a Continental engineer has not only won great admiration, but has suggested imitation. The process may be susceptible of many improvements, but it may be regarded as a matter of certainty that the mechanician has at length. certainty that the mechanician has at length invaded the province of the miner. There has been much discussion of late in England as to the durability of the coul-fields of the country. Some preat authorities have maintained that at the present rate of consumption the available coal will be exhausted in two hundred years, inasmuch as the deep nt wo hundred years, inasmuch as the deep seams lie too deep to be profitably worked. The question is one intimately affecting England's commercial greatness. There is plenty of coal in the world to last for untold generations. The store in America is enormous, and the store in Australia is not yet generally appreciated. But England's manufacturing appreciated. But England's manufacturing greatness has been largely based on its working in iron, and its ironworks are dependent on its coal. Its supremacy would be in danger if its coal became scarce and dear.

In answer to these apprehensions it has been urged that there is a tendency to great economy in the use of fuel; that water-power is coming largely into use again; that science will develop other modes of generating heat, and that thus the dependence upon coal will become less than it is at present. A second ground for encouragement has been found in the invention of coal getting machines. These machines cheapen the cost of mining, and will, therefore, admit of deep mining which would otherwise be unremunerative.

A secondary though great advantage of the machine is that it helps to ventilate mines, and in deep works especially this is an important consideration. Most of the machines are worked consideration. Most of the machines are worked by compressed air, and at every stroke of the piston a small discharge of fresh cool air is emitted at precisely the place where the men are at work. The value of this in improving the healthfulness of the occupation, and in diminishing the risk of danger from foul air, can hardly be overrated. The air thus supplied, and which is conveyed down a pipe, is necessa-rily purer than air introduced by any of the ordinary processes of ventilation, and which, in whatever volume it may be introduced, has necessarily to pass down shafts and along galleries, and becomes none the sweeter for the journey.

The economy in the use of the machine is The economy in the use of the machine is said to be twofold. In the first place, where there is work enough to pay for the investment of capital in a machine, the actual cost of hewing per ton is less by the mechanical operation than by hand labour. This is only in accordance with the general law, that machinery is cheaper than muscle wherever there is continuous and the drill makes less slack than the pickaxe, and therefore there is less waste.

The effect of this invention will naturally be in favour of the workman. It will make his occupation less laborious and less unhealthy. occupation less laborious and less unhealthy. Instead of being a machine himself, he will be in charge of a machine. He will pass from the status of a labourer to the status of an artisan. This has been more or less the effect of nearly all great inventions. Their tendency has been to elevate the condition of the working class as well as to benefit the consumers. As this fact has become more fully recognised the opposition to machinery is diminishing. That opposition was based on the supposition that machinery by dispensing with human labour reduced wages, and took the bread out of the poor man's mouth. A fuller experience and a wider view of all the consequences has shown how erroneous that supposition is. The temporary, or rather apparent effect of machinery is to displace human labour, the permanent effect is to increase the demand for it. The form of occupation is changed, but the fact of occupation remains. And the kind of labour called for is generally of a higher order. It involves more well as to benefit the consumers. As this fact generally of a higher order. It involves more of mental qualification, and makes skill more to be valued than mere physical strength. In one respect, no doubt, the great subdivision of occupations brought about by machinery tends to monotony, and so far to a cramping of the mind, but there are many correctives of this tendency, and the general effect is the other way.

If the use of the coal-getting machines becomes as general in England as at present promises to be the case, they will, no doubt, soon be imported into Australia. We have at present no deep mines difficult of ventilation, but a reduction in the cost of mining would be cost of mining would be but a reduction in the cost of mining would be a great saving, and give a great stimulus to production. It is in countries where labour is dear that the advantages of labour-saving machinery are most conspicuous. America is the most signal illustration of this, and in no country in the world has more ingenuity been displayed in striking out new ideas or in adapting old but neglected ideas, And the immense advance in mechanical contrivance is coexistent with constant improvement in the

In the report for the past (the third) year of the club's existence, the committee expressed regret that, in consequence of the non-attendance of members at the general sectings, and from other causas, they were unable during the greater portion of the season to carry on the business of the club. This led them to manage the affairs solely by committee, and the most successful results had attended the change. By reason of the sists of things adverted to, the committee had been enabled to arrange for only five matches, in two of which the club was retorious, the other three were drawn. The financial condition of the club was highly satisfactory. During the winder season, a football club in connection with the cricket club had been instituted, and the precedings had afforded much gratification. Affassian was made in grateful terms to the handsome present by the president, Mr. E. Flood, of a case of match bats for the use of members. In conclusion, the committee urged upon the members the necessity for increased attention to the interests of the club, in order that it might keep pace with older and more favoured brethren, and assume that position among the leading clubs to which it should be their prick to stain. The accounts showed a credic biasnee of £17 18s. 11d.; the football club had a balance in hand of £4 18s. 74. Mr. E. Flood was re-elected president, and Mr. W. Hennassy, honorary secretary. The general committee were Messars. G. B. Eclby. E. Sadier, G. C. Cooke, W. Hennassy, honorary secretary, and usanimously adopted. RIGH SPECIMENS.—As a proof that Adolong is not "done." it may be mentioned that Mr. Parker has lately taken from his claim on the Victoria Red, some of the finest specimens of stot that have been seen since the Adolong reef-were discovered. The samples alluded to, which were collected by Mr. Parker's sons, one of whom we understand discovered the leader, weigh about 20 lbm, and will, it is calculated, yield from 5 to 7 ozs. Some of them are absolutely encrusted with, and full of the precious metal, and Mr. Parker has since secured other specimens equally rich. Meser. WAGGA WAGGA.—Last Saturday there was no indication of a change in the weather, and on Sunday prayers were said in St. John's for rain; near midnight a heavy storm burst over the town, and the welcome rain fell in torrents, continuing, with various intermissions, up to Thursday evening, when it passed away to be succeeded by a sharp frost, which was visible for some time on Friday morning. This week's downpour will prove a great boot to the district; all the orchards in the neighbourhood since the middle of last week have burst into bloom, and luxuriant verdure and the bright blossoms of fruit trees meet and delight the eye at every turn; and when the wind blows from the south-west it carries with it over the town the rich fragrance of the assacias growing on the Forningalaria hills. The Register of that date reports a case of abduction from Melbourne, and has the following respecting it:

"'At noon, on Monday, Inspector Peterswald, accompanied by two other officers of the metropolitan police force, proceeded to a house occupied by John P. Major and Julia Nicholla, with two other females, near the Tivoli Hotel, in Piris-street East, and arrested both Major and Nicholls for the abduction of a very young girl, named Sarah Meadows, from the house of her parents in Melbourne. The girl is, we understand, not yet fourteen years old, and will be placed under police surveillance until she can be handed over to her friends in Victoria. The two prisoners and the young girl will be sent in charge of a detective by the South Australian to-day to Melbourne. The prisoner Major, it is said, kept a Fruit and oyster shop in Little Bourke-street, Melbourne, from which city he recently boited, arriving here with two or three females about three weeks ago."

On the subject of the late rainfall in South Australia, the Register of Tuesday has the following:—"We are glad to find that the rains which fell on Sunday have extended to the northward, and have been much more abundant than in the neighbourhood of Adelaide. We have received from the Telegraph office a record of the amount which fell up to nine o'clock on Monday morning; and, as we travel northward, we find that the quantity gradually increases. In all those places, except Mount Gambier and Guichen Bay, the report gives 'heavy rains,' and at these places it states that it way 'showery.' It is hoped, as the rain has been most copious the further north the record extends, that it may have yone still further, and that the settlers in the far north may have had their hearts gladdened by the fall of fruitful showers."

The City of Adelaide cleared yesterday for Melbourne with 40,000 sovereigns. Messrs. L. E. Threlkeld and Co. held to-day

Messrs. L. E. Threlkeld and Co. held to-day an important sale, comprising the entire cargo of the Music, from Foochow, with the first of the new teas, imported by Messrs. Brown and Co. This sale attracted a very numerous attendance of merchants and the trade. The shipment being pronounced as one of the finest assortments that had ever been imported to this market. The whole parcel with the assortments that had ever been imported to this market, the whole parcel, with the exception of a few boxes, was disposed of at most satisfactory rates. The finest flavoured breakfast congou realised 2s. 6d. per lb. in chests and half-chests. The fine rich flavoured congous at £7 15s to £8 per chest; fine congou, £7 to £7 14s.; ordinary ditto, £6 12s. 6d. te £6 15s. Boxes: fine breakfast kaisow, 26s. to 30s.; ditto fine congou, 21s. 6d. to 23s. The total number of congou, 21s. 6d. to 23s. The total number of packages sold was 2391 chests, 2633 half-chests, 2063 boxes. There were also several large £36 12s. 6d. to £37 for light counter sugars; £34 to £34 10s. for yellow ditto; £30 for bright ration; £26 5s. to £28 for low ration. An invoice of Morton's oilmen's stores brought full rates. The Island produce, ex Thomas Woodward, realised 61d. per lb. for the fungus, and ls. 44d. for the limejuice. The total amount of the sale was upwards of £40,000. The same firm also report having sold privately the cargo of the Faraway, from Valparaiso, on account of Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, and Co., comprising 260 tons best silk-dressed Chilian flour and 13,000 bushels wheat, at an improvement on las

We have Melbourne papers to the 11th instant. The Argus says:

In the import market to-day, little in the way of sales has transpired. Prices of breadstuffs are well sustained, the market closing firm at £20 loss, and £21 for town and country brands of Adelaide flour. For Chillan where, a hadden over. The Mary Ann had not arrived in the Bay when business closed. Our attention has been called to the fact that she has not been out more than 10s days, but this is sufficient to remove the impression that was current when she was first reported, that this was a vesic not previously heard of amongst those coming forward. There are buyers for the flour, though we have not yet heard of any actual sales. The remainder of the those of Australa's flour is for the present withdrawn from the market. A parcel of sauce icase whisky has been placed at 7s. 3d. We heard of one private terms. Maize is stiff at 3s. 9d., with numerous buyers at that figure.

In vain it was pointed out that, as a foreigner, he could not be brought under this rule; in vain it was stated also that his wester was so built that, to cable her to be worked with safety, he would be compelled, if he got the boats, to pick them overtoord when he got to sea. It proved equally value for his safety, he would be compelled with the Act is question. In vain it was a foreigner, he could not be brought under this rule; in vain it

Our Hobart Town files are to the 7th instant. The Mercury reports as follows:

To-day the markets have been quiet, and we have no news of importance to chronicle. The breadstuffs market centiunes duil, and it is a matter of difficulty to arrive at the true quotations, Flour at the mills is quoted at £19 los, to £20, but small sales only have been made at those rates for local use. A parcel of Adelaide sith-dressed flour, Hart's brand, is in the market at £11 per ton, and unless this figure, or something near it, is obtained, the flour will go into store. Our yesterday's report as to wheat appeared somewhat anomal-ms, quotations being stated at from its. 3d, to 8s. 6d, per bushel, and an absolute sale of a large parcel being reported at 9s. This is, however, literally true; quotations have been as stated for some days past, and small sales have taken place, but we believe the real market value of good samples to be to per bushel. Other produce continues unchanged in price.

The Launceston Times of the 8th instant says:

TELESCOPE RIFLES.

TELESCOPE RIFLES.

From the very earliest times, when the general conduct of warfare was made to assume an organised aspect, and the attack as well as the defence of fortified towns acknowledged the advantages of the methodical proceedings called sieges and defences, down to the present era,—long ranges—we say long in a comparative sense—as well as accuracy, never ceased to be considered important auxiliaries to the action of battering-rams and catapults, or siege guns and mortars. There are too many instances in which small groupe can be assailed in the various circumstances of war, either in the course of the reconscissances that precede engagements, or the duties inherent to camplife, to the general direction of siege operations, to the forced passage of rivers, &c., to neglect, or to justify the neglect of, all such arrangements as can ensure the attainment of exceptional results, under conditions of an unusual nature. The most dangerous combinations may be so upset by the loss of a man; the most promising attack and disheartening defence may respectively be so well befiled and reanimated by a successful means of retarding the gradual progress of the trenches; the construction of pontoon bridges may be so usefully and triumphantly impeded by long range penetration, if means can be found capable of doing execution at cannon ranges, and yet with less exposure, though with greater case, than the case would be by planting guns in battery—that it would be folly to neglect encouraging the productions of weapons capable of surpassing the ordinary average and conditions of destructiveness. There are, and must ever be, a variety of cases in which the ranges of small arms will be insufficient, and the use of artillery impossible through the nature of the ground, independently of other considerations. Then it is that the utility of an intermediate class of projectile arms will be insufficient, and the use of artifled firearms had become so general, that at the national target practice carried on in Leipsic in the year musers to keep at a respection usuance from the carbons of tige and the Minic rifles came into use, the cumbrous rampart musket was cast aside, its range being considerably excelled by that of the former; yet there was no reason why it should not have been improved upon, so as to keep shead of the new rifle as it had surpassed the old amooth-bores of the infantry. That some such improvement would have been found necessary we cannot for a moment doubt, had the Emperor Napoleon continued his operations in Venetia. As it was, such a necessity had no time to make itself felt amongst European armies, and so the Confederates have respect the credit of bringing this class of arms once more into use, since it is in their ranks, and under the pressure of circumstances which needed the utmost possible help that science and ingenuity could suggest, that they have been revived. But they have not been retained in their former state; on the contrary, all the additions and changes have been made that the progress of the last few years could suggest, and thus it has been possible to harns camps, amony batteries, pick officers, and explode caisoons at no less a range than 2000 yards

The Council of the National Rifle Association, having been informed of these facts some time last year, soon appreciated the importance of premoting the study and manufacture of weapons $t$ for the work elleged to be done by those resorted to amongst the Confederates. Consequently, acting in accordance with this patriotic feeling, they decided to offer a prize to be competed for at 2000 yards distance, limiting the weight of the rifles to 16 lbs. The rifles were to have telescopes attached to them, and, morrover, in awakening a taste for competitions and practice with the professor of the former of the formon when the professor is the confered came of yesterday at the Gravesen ranges. The day was remarkably clear, but the mirage in the earlier part of the formon was also as the region of the confered came of yesterdays at the Gravesen range in the

UNPROTECTED MALES.

In a Parliamentary paper recently issued, Captain Tyler informs his chief that "Gentlemen passengers, as well as railway officers of all classes, constantly refuse to travel singly with a stranger of the weaker sex, under the belief that it is only common prudence to avoid in this manner all risk of being accussed—for purposes of extortion—of insult or assault." The paragraph has been approvingly quoted in most of the newpapers; and it is seldom that a statement so bold, and at the same time so veracious, appears in a departmental report. Any one who travels much knows that a good deal of alarm has been excited among respectable males of late by the mania which appears to have seized the other sex for imagining, or asserting, that they have been criminally assaulted. Upon railways the terror has become a perfect panic. No man with any consideration for his character will venture within winking distance of any woman who is reasonably good-looking, and young girls are avoided by all prudent persons as if they had the plague. Old women, and very ugly women—women of that sterling repulsiveness that they carry in their faces an unanswerable reduction of any possible charge of assault—are at a high premium just now, especially for long railway journeys. Now is their hour of compensation. The men may turn from them in the drawing-room, may manorure to be separated from them at the dinner-table, but in the railway carriage they enjoy a popularity for which bright eyes and youthful cheeks pine in vain. True as the needle to the pole, the cautious passenger flies to the favoured seat which places him under the wing of hairless and cappy age. The alarm is not wholly groundless. A passion for particular kinds of perjury does at particular times infect particular people. In Germany and America, the witchest delusion, with all the horrible torments which were inflicted under its influence, was maintained entirely by the apparently disinterested testimony of a considerable number of girls, especially very sagacity with which the Coventry Police Superial tendent detected the flasehood of a plausible and ictually reversed in respect to them. Unless innocence is positively made out, guilt is inferred. Juries make it all the principle always to believe the woman, and they are careful to sworth the other woman, and they are careful to sworth the other woman, and they are careful to sworth the other woman, and they are careful to sworth the other woman, and they are careful to sworth the other woman which is a point of principle always to believe the woman, and they are careful to sworth the woman careful to look upon perjury of this kind, even when it is decisively proved, as a weakness of lovely woman which rather exalts than diminishes her charms. So that the accused on such a complaint is in evil case. Virtually he is called the woman asserts to have taken place at a given time did not take place. If he fails, the chances are that he is absolutely lost. A soldier, or sallor, or an M.P. for a populous borough, might recover from such a conviction, with no worse damage than a standing joke against the woman. S. Practically, the presumption of law in this case is that the man is guilty unless he is proved to be innocent. It is worth while to examine the woman. S. Practically, the presumption of law in this case is that the man is guilty unless he is proved to be innocent. It is worth while to examine the woman in the woman can have no interest in making such an accustion unless there be some ground for it. The who cherish this theory appear to have wholly a verlooked the easy application of such a charge to the purposes of extorting money. The same kind of reasoning used to be innocent to maintain that a woman could never be so untrue to what are called her "womanly intentes" as to father a child on the wrong man. Facts, however, were too strong for the admirers of womanly intentes. I was a strength of the purpose of extorting money. The same the summary of the purpose of extorting money was to be a summary of the pu Penning upon testimony that could hot be assailed. Had it not been for this lucky accident, that idle Sunday afternoon's gossip would have been utter, irretrievable ruin to him.

There must be something wrong in our administration of justice when any man's whole propects in life are at the mercy of any girl's idle talk. The radical evil is the facile credit which is given to young girls in these cases. The idea seems to have possessed jurymen and magistrates that they are less likely to lie because they are young. A kind of traditional theory cenceraing the innocence of childhood, and a confused recollection of the texts in the baptismal service, seem to float across their minds; and the result is a fixed idea that truthfulness may be counted on in the inverse proportion to age. No calculation can be more fallacious. Other things being equal, young people will generally lie much more freely than their elders; and the reason of the difference is that they are more ignorant. It is true that religion is often warmer in youth than it is in maturer age. But emotional religion is, unhappily, not the prevailing motive with the mass of human beings. Most people are deterred from falsehoods by the consequences they involve. If they are good sort of people, they shrink from the harm a falsehood would do to their neighbour. If they are purely selfash, they fear detection and the punishment that follows it. But both motives become more powerful in proportion as their knowledge of the world enables them to realise the amount of harm a falsehood will do to their neighbours or themselves. A child has no knowledge of the world and therefore has no conception of the injury it is doing to itself or others. Such words as "ruin," "diagrace," "blasted prospect," are mere words to it. The most powerful motive for telling the truth is consequently absent from its mind; and nothing remains which will not be easily overcome by the desire to escape from a momentary embarrasament. Another strange delusion on the part of the administrator

Better than Cod Liver Oil,

IODIZED OIL OF J. PERSONNE,

Approved by the Imperial Academy of Medicine of Paris.

According to a report of the Academy, this oil is a medicine of high value, possessing many advantages over the cod liver oil. It has a quicker and more sure action in cases of scrotula, syphilis, and different complaints in which the latter has been ordered.

General Depot:—In Paris, at LABELONYE and CO.'S, Chemists; in Sydney, at J. and E. ROW'S; and at every good druggist's in Australia.

WIDOW WELCH'S PILLS, FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS.—Mrs. SARAH SMITHERS, granddaughter to the Widow Welch, continues to prepare this celebrated modicine from the only original and genuine family recipe.

this celebrated medicine from the only original and genuins family recipe.

Mothers, guerdians, managers of schools, and all who have the ener of females from an early ace, are strongly recommended never to be without this safe and efficient remedy. Its just selebrity for all Female Complaints, Nervous Disorders, Weakness of the Solida, Loss of Appetits, Sick Headache, Lowness of Spirits, and particularly for irregularities in the female system, have obtained to it a most extensive and increasing demand.

Purchasers should therefore stend to the following CAUTION.—To be careful that what they purchase is prepared by Mrs. Sarah Smithers, who is the only person in possession of the original recipe. The genuine are wrapped in blue paper, and signod on the outside label by Sarah Smithers.

Sold in boxes, by most respectable chemists.

CAUTION.—CHLORODYNE.—IN CHANCERY.—
Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood stated that Dr. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of Chlorodyna, that the statements of the defendant Freeman were deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say that they had been sworn to. Eminent hospital physicians of London stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than Dr. Browne's.—See Times, July 13, 1864.

FEVERS, DYSENTERY, DIARRHCEA, Consumption, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, &c.—The safeet and best remedy is that marvellous one known as CHLORODYNE, which was discovered by Dr. J. Cellis Browne, M.R.C.S.L. (Ex-Army Medical Staff), and the secret of its recipe confided only to J. T. DAVEN-PORT, pharmacoutical chemist, 23, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury-equare, who is the sole manufacturer. Medical testimony furnished by the highest authorities in military, naval, and civil practice, and the numerous gratifying statements from the public generally, establishes this medicine as invaluable. It relieves pain, soothes the system, inducing refreshing and soothing sleep, without producing or leaving any unpleasant effects like opium, and may be taken at any time in a few drop dosse.

Rome genuine without the words "Dr. J. Cellis Browne's Chicrodyne" on the wrapper.

RAMPTON'S PILL OF HEALTH.—This excellent Family Pill is a medicine of long-twice efficacy for purifying the blood, so very essential for the foundation of good health, and correcting all disorders of the stomach and bowels. Two or three doses will convince the afflicted of its salutary effects. The stomach will speedily regain its strength; a healthy action of the liver, bowels, and kidneys will rapidly take place; and renewed health will be the quick result of taking this medicine, according to the directions accompanying each box.

Persons of full habit, who are subject to headsche, giddiness, drowsiness, and singing in the ears, srising from too great a flow of blood to the head, should never be without them, as many dangerous symptoms will be entirely carried off by their timely use.

For females, these pills are truly excellent, removing all obstructions, the distressing headache so very prevalent with the sex, depression of spirits, duliness of sight, nervous affections, blotches, pimples, and sallowness of the skin, and gives healthy, juvenile bloom to the complexion.

To mothers they are confidently recommended as the best medicine that can be taken, and for children of all ages they are unequalled.

These pills unite the recommendation of a mild operation with the most successful effect; and for elderly people, or where an occasional aperient is required, nothing can be better adapted.

Her Majesty's Commissioners have authorised the name and address of "Thomas Prout, No. 229, Strand, London," to be impressed upon the Government stamps affixed to each box of the genuine medicine.

Sold in England at 1s, 14d, and 2s, 9d, per box.

MACHINE.—In 1864 it competed and reserved nine out of ten prizes given for the best Sewing Machine in the United States. It forms a flat, even, and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear if properly sewed, when every third stitch is cut. This machine can be run but one way; two thousand stitches, or two yards of work, can be done in one minute without dropping a stitch. The machine is so simple and accurate in its construction that it supersedes the use of the noisy shuttle, and with one thread produces all the practical results of the two-thread machines, and more, for it fells without basting, and hems the finest muslin without puckering. It will saw perfectly from one to thirty-two thicknesses of calico without alteration of tension. The highest colonial testimosials can be given of their practical working. S. HEBBLEWHITE, 432,

MENINDIE STATION, Darling River, New South Wales.

RYAN and HAMMOND have received instructions to offer for absolute sale by auction, at Wright's (late Morton's) Hotel, Bourks-street West, Malbourne, on THURSDAY, 28th September instant, at 2 o'clock p.m.

The whole of those valuable stations known as MENINDIE RUNS, consisting of the following:

Alma
Balaclava
Combaralta
Condensation
Combaration
Combar ving:—
Outer Pammama
Mara
Candilla
Paringa Guaria
Malakoff
Inkermann
Mount Gippe
Bodan,

Outer Natoria

And
Two blocks in South Australia, adjoining the other rama.
The station has a frontage to the River Darling of about 40 miles, together with several extensive fresh-water lakes.
The country consists of well-grassed saitbush plains of the most fattening description, interesorted by sund bills and belts of myull and box forest. The margins of the lakes at certain seasons of the year are clothed with the celetrated Darling clover, the fattening qualities of which are too well known to require comment.
From the Scope Ranges and Coonbaralba Monntains numerous crecks take their rise, and offer great facilities for the storage of large supplies of water, which may also be obtained by sinking; some of the wells already in working order being capable of watering 10,900 sheep throughout the year.
Immediately behind the Combaralba Mountains the ebtained by sinking; some of the wells already in working ceder being capable of watering 10,800 sheep throughout the year.

Immediately behind the Coonbaralba Mountains the country is known as the Maxwell Downs, having an elevation of about 1200 feet above the sea level, and forming some of the finest sheep country in the district, and on which water to obtainable by sinking in the beds of the creek, and prings have lately been discovered. As the country becomes more known, no doubt a large number of these prings will be opened up.

The capabilities of this magnificent country can scarcely be over-estimated, and the facilities offered by the steamers for conveying stores and wood to and from the station should not over-feeked; nor should the commanding position the station occupies for the supplying of the Adelaide and Melbourne markets with fat stock, of which large numbers have been annually disposed of.

With the rune will be sold the undermentioned stock, more or less, as by last returns:

11 200 CATTLE.

FINE QUEENSLAND CATTLE STATION AND STOCK FOR SALE. DOWERS, RUTHERFORD and CO. are POWERS, RUTHERFORD and CO. are instructed by the mortgages to sell by auction, at Peachmest's, late Morton's, Hotel, Boarkestreet West, Melbooarne, on WEDNESDAY, 27th September next, at 2 o'clock,

THE DOTSWOOD STATION.

Consisting of eight blocks of most superior counter, with an area of over 440 square miles of lightly timbered, sound, open ridges, hills, plains, and large open fate, situated on the Burdekin and Oansbar rivers, to which it has frontages of over 80 miles.

With the station will be sold about 3000 head of quiet well-bred cattle, of mixed ages and sezon, some of which are old or inferior, and there are at present about 600 of them fat.

The run is within 35 miles of a port and 16 miles of a township; it is capable of carrying at least 15,000 head of cattle in all seasons, and the country all round is settled en.

cattle in all seasons, and the country all round is settled ein.

Although at present the only stock on the runs, with the exception of about 26 horses and two teams of bullocks, are cattle, there is a great portion of the property most admirably adapted for sheep. The improvements, which are most substantial and complete, comprising overything needed to work the station, consist of homestead, huts, yards, paddocks, &c., &c. Allogether this is a most desirable investment, and one the Auctioneers can strongly recommend to the attention of capitalists, possessing, as it does, everything requisite to make it one of the best stations in the north or west of Quesculand.

For maps, terms, and full particulars apply at the offices of the Auctioneers, 123. Quesn-street. Mobourne.

melon, not much smaller than the Saracen's Head on Snow-hill.

Don't think that I am needlessly digressing when I descant on diligences in connection with St. Denisdu-Sig. The little Algerian town is precisely the place for the memories of the old Calais and Paris journey to press thick upon you. St. Denis-du-Sig has its Messageries Générales, and in front thereof are still visible, arriving and departing, those fine old yellow structures with the gouty wheels, the dropsical bodies, and the hydrocephalous luggage-piled roofs, which of old made the name of Laftte and Caillard famous. The diligence, half beloved and half abhorred machine, is fading away in Europe from the face of civilisation; but in Algeria it still flourishes in all its quaint discomfort. They never scrub it, they never brush its cushions; oh, no! Last year's mud is on its wheels, last year's dust on its leathern tilt. There seems to be a special breed of horses, the flower of the knacker's yards, affected to the service of diligences. The drivers have a special language, an exclusive vocabulary of execrations to be applied to recalcitrant steeds. For instance, I have often heard a French hackney coachman call his horse a pig, a cow, and a cretin; but I never heard any but a diligence driver addressing a jibbing wheeler as an Ostrogoth, or a kicking leader as a Chinese. What will become of the diligence-drivers when the railways are made from Algiers to Oran, and from Constantine to Algiers? They will never come to driving engines, for they are too old to study steam; and, besides, it is a waste of words to call a locomotive an Ostrogoth. The conducteurs—the genuine conducteurs as we knew them in France—the consequential but good-natured functionaries with the silver badges, the caps with military peaks, and the gaily braided jackets—have already quitted the scene in disgust. They have become railway guards, or found places in the administration. The conducteur of the Algerian diligence is a lean and haggard Arab boy, pockmarked and ophthalmic, few times a day, there is a new everhead when he have presponded between that straps; but anon his brown and skinny face is granning at the open the have a strap in the new and skinny face is granning at the open the have a strap to the have a strain to complete the control of the control o prevail among the workmen employed in demonstration of the new Boulevards, and that some saturatine wag had proposed to give to this new disease in honour of the Prefect of the Seine, the name of La Fievre Housemannique. Here is a peg on which Lord Derby and the other anti-railway lords might hang most eloquent arguments in favour of leaving the poor in possession of their pigstyes. I am not doctor enough to determine what fevers may be bred by pulling down old houses, but I am certain there are a good many which fourish apace through leaving old houses standing.

Against the Bedouins and the fever, then, the good folks of St. Denis-du-Sig had to battle for many a weary month. To build their houses they were compelled to bring masous, Spaniards for the most part, from Oran; and these masons would not touch chisel or trowel under two pisatres, or ten francs a day. Then the Administration insisted that, for the protection of the colonists against the Bedouins, each farm should be surrounded by a rampart and guarded by bastions. A lively kind of life; but the undertaking has turned out in the end exceedingly successful. Cotton, tobacco, and corn are the three great staples of produce; and for drying and cutting tobacco, St. Denis-du-Sig possesses one of the largest establishments in Algeria. There are flour mills, and cotton-spinning factories, some quite on a Lancastrian scale, in the neighbourhood; and in the factories it is pleasant to see Arabs and Europeans working tegether at themules, and in the lobby the burnous and the blouse of the work-people hanging side by side. Your great harmoniser and humaniser, after all, is the machine moved by steam power—your "melancholy mad elephant," as Mr. Dickens called it. You can't get hold of the man of flocks and herds; he is here to-day and gone tomorrow; he strikes his tent and is off. Try to civilise him, and he is scudding over the desert on a dromedary. He will sell you an ox, or buy a bale of cloth frem you, but half an hour after market he will cut your threat. T

As a rule they are cultivated gentlemen. They have leisure to bring to light, and taste to admire, that which is old and beautiful around them; and their influence with the neighbouring gentry brings what funds are required for the restoration of the relics of the past. In the last century it was otherwise. Gothic architecture was at a discount, and Parson Trulliber was a type of clergyman by no means uncommon. The churchwardens had things their own way, and "beautifed" the churches to the utter obliteration of all that was beautiful in them. In France the clergy have very little power, and very little inclination, to act as conservators of ancient art. Archweology, encaustic painting, or glass staining, are not branches of art cultivated in the seminaries; as a rule the clergy do not belong to the class of gentry; they are good and pious men, but unlearned; male devotees are rare, and the donations of pious ladics tend rather to the purchase of a new set of vestments, or the commissioning of a painter from Paris to paint a staring altar piece full of sprawling angels, than towards the restoration of a chancel or the staining of an oriel window. This is the state of things in France; in Algeria it is ten times worso. There is no resident gentry at all. The clergy are laborious parish priests or toiling monks, who regard what is left of ancient intest either with indifference or with horror. As for the military, they would eat conscousos out of a sarcophagus, and tear up a tesselated pavement to dig a hearth for their pot-an-fen. Everything is left to the Administration. The Administration means *Colipsement that is to say, demolition and reconstruction after the boulevard type. I believe that M. Berbrugger, the estimable curator of the Museum at Algiers, suffers acutely from that disastrous administrative passion for pulling down—the more so so the iconoclasts frequently contrive to kill two birds with one stone, destroying not only an old Moorish house, but rooting up the foundations of a Reman villa.
